Administrative/ biographical history	Eastwood District Council was established by the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973. It took over part of the functions of the Burgh of Barrhead and of part of those of Renfrewshire County Council. Eastwood District Council was elected in 1974, but existed only as a shadow authority until 1975 when it assumed its full powers. The Council's main functions were: district courts (under the District Courts (Scotland) Act 1975), building control, burial and cremation, cleansing, conservation areas, development control, environmental health, housing, leisure and recreation, libraries, licensing, local planning, and parks. The functions of the District Council were delegated through a system of Committees which were manned by members of the elected Council. The Council was led by a Provost (chair) and 11 other elected members. The Committee structure changed somewhat over the years but the main committees were the Policy and Resources and the Finance and General Purposes Committees. Several departments of Eastwood District Council were initially based at Paisley (outwith the area of geographic responsibility of the Council) until new Council Headquarters were opened at Eastwood Park in 1980. The District Council was abolished in 1996 when the provisions of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1994 transferred its functions to the new East Renfrewshire Council.
Archival history	The records were retained by the creating departments of Eastwood District Council before transferring to the relevant departments of the new East Renfrewshire Council, although some records were passed to the libraries at an unknown date prior to 2005.
